Idaho family will spend summer vacation preaching biodiesel

Posted on June 24, 2007

Filed under: Biodiesel, Green Culture
 Biodiesel advocates sure do look like normal people don't they? Sometimes cleverly disguised as high school students, the biodiesel chorus is made up of people who were bitten by the powerful idea of biodiesel, and now want to share what they know. That's what happened to the Jenkins family in Nampa, Idaho, and they're gonna put pedal to the metal to show it. This summer, the family will travel America from coast to coast in a diesel motor home, filling up with biodiesel along the way and talking up the biofuel every chance they get. The RV has been decora...
